

Dog Park Update – August 23, 2013

Sniffing Out Dog Park Details

Brea's next new park is sure to be a big hit with four-legged friends. After much anticipation, construction is now underway to build Wildcatters Dog Park at the southwest corner of Santa Fe and Valencia. This dedicated space is expected to open in January 2014 after allowing a necessary period for new plantings to establish.

Park design includes many amenities suggested by the public during the community engagement efforts in September-October 2012. These amenities include a double-gate entry, drinking fountains for both humans and dogs, trees for shade, benches and picnic tables. Large dogs will have almost an acre of room to run (almost the size of a football field) while the small dogs can enjoy more secure play in an area just under a third of an acre.

Construction is underway to prepare for concrete walkways and installation of deposited granite areas. Fencing has been placed and additional trees will soon be planted to augment mature vegetation already in the area. Pet owners will soon be rewarded for their patience with the progress.
